

Tom Handy
Project Process Consultant

In his 4th decade as a construction industry veteran, Tom has constructed multiple building types including education, office, retail and warehouse facilities. Tom's consulting role with Accutech is focused on sustaining world-class construction process improvement throughout the organization and focused on specific projects. Tom once held a world-wide, two-year record for the largest tilt-up distribution center – 1.76 million square feet (37 acres) under one roof. Projects of this magnitude require clear objectives, goals and timelines, which then created on which to focus his team, subcontractors and suppliers.

Tom's focus is on project quality and the process for achieving that. His broad project experience has created a commitment to excellence that finds root in attention to the small details, which he mentally visualizes coming together as part of the whole project. This was seen in his constructing a 140,000 square foot retail center in 81 days with only two minor punch list items. He prides himself on getting along with owners, sub-contractors and even with 200 side-walk superintendent residents of a long-term care facility. Tom is active in Habitat for Humanity, extra-curricular clubs in his local public school district, and his church.
